

Prison Terms For Four In Johnson Case; Acquit Judge

By MARTIN BRACKBILL

Harrisburg, March 24 (AP)—Former Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson and one son, Capt. Albert W. Johnson, Jr., were acquitted today on conspiracy charges and four other co-defendants, convicted at the same time, were promptly sentenced to two years imprisonment and fined $10,000 each.

The verdict acquitting the former judge and his son was returned in the same court over which he presided for more than 20 years.

Those convicted and sentenced by Judge James Alger Fee, of Oregon, specially presiding, were two other sons of the former judge, Miller A. and Donald M. Johnson, and John Memolo and Jacob Greenes, the latter two of Scranton.

File Appeal Notices

Defense Counsel for Donald M. and Miller A. Johnson and Greenes and Memolo filed separate formal notices of appeal from the conviction and sentence with the clerk of Lloyd Kleinfelter of Biglerville was a member of the jury that sat in the Johnson case for more than three weeks. Miss Elizabeth Evans, West Lincoln avenue, was one of two alternate jurors drawn in the case. The other alternate was taken ill and dismissed early in the trial. Miss Evans returned home Saturday night and Mr. Kleinfelter today.

The Middle District U. S. Court here. Former Judge Johnson, a short time after the verdict was returned, issued this statement:

"This was the first opportunity that my cause came before an impartial court and jury, the verdict establishes my innocence. I have suffered untold heartaches because of a vicious political persecution to get my seat on the bench."

Judge Denies Motions

As the sentence of each of the four defendants convicted was pronounced, Judge Fee directed them to be taken into custody of the U. S. Marshal. The four were led from the courtroom separately.

Later, attorneys for Greenes and Memolo sought their release on bail but Judge Fee denied the motion.

Charles J. Margiotti, representing the Johnsons, said "I am not making the request (for bail) in this case because I don't think it is timely."

Stanley Coar, Scranton, and Thomas B. Caldwell, Harrisburg, counsel for Memolo and Greenes, respectively, then asked the court that sentence be stayed pending an appeal.

YOUNG FATHER OF 8 DIES IN BURNING HOME

Zolan Calvin Harbaugh, 42-year-old father of eight children, was fatally burned and his brother, Maurice T. Harbaugh, is reported in a serious condition at the Emergency hospital, Frederick, as the result of a fire which destroyed the log home of the former early Sunday morning at Blue Ridge Summit.

Harrowing details of the fire were related to the Maryland state policemen and members of the Blue Ridge Summit fire company by Mrs. Maurice Harbaugh, who with her husband and child, were spending the night at the Zolan Harbaugh home.

Mrs. Harbaugh said she had retired about 2 o'clock Sunday morning leaving her husband and Zolan sitting in the living room talking. She awoke about 4 o'clock to find her room filled with smoke. She screamed to arouse other occupants of the house. Her husband, Maurice, rushed from the living room, which was ablaze, and aided his wife and Mrs. Zolan Harbaugh escort the nine children from the burning structure.

Zolan Is Trapped

In the confusion the group had forgotten Zolan who it was thought had left the room. When it was found he was not outside the building Maurice rushed to a window and heard his brother screaming for help.

Maurice gained entrance to the living room but was stopped by flames and smoke and barely managed to escape through a window.

appeal, but Judge Fee replied, "motion is denied."

Congratulations And Sympathy
"Will your honor be available for the same request after an appeal is made?" Coar asked.

"I will be available and I will deny it at that time also," Judge Fee stated.

As soon as the short court session adjourned, well-wishers gathered around Former Judge Johnson, congratulating him on the verdict and at the same time expressed sympathy for conviction of his sons.

Kiss For Judge
Mrs. Mary Johnson, wife of the former jurist and a defense witness, who has been here for the last week of the four weeks' trial, came up to the former judge with tears streaming down her face and kissed him.

The jury returned its verdict to U. S. District Judge James Alger Fee, of Oregon, specially presiding, at 10:07 a. m. (EST), 43 hours and 52 minutes after receiving the case at 2:15 p. m. Saturday. The jury, however, ended its deliberations at 10:05 p. m. Sunday.

The 74-year-old former jurist, who signed from the federal bench in July, 1945, while his official conduct was under investigation by the House Judiciary committee, and the other defendants were charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States in disposition of a number of bankruptcies, receivership and criminal cases handled in Johnson's court.

Fee-splitting Charged
The government charged in the indictment that the defendants benefitted financially in disposition of cases and presented testimony of fee-splitting by trustees and receivers appointed by Former Judge Johnson. The defense denied any irregularities in court procedure.

"Things smelled so bad in the middle district of Pennsylvania that they cried to high heavens and Judge Johnson was the rotten head of corruption in this district," special assistant U. S. Attorney General Valentine Hammack told the jury in his final argument.

For the defense, Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, counsel for Johnson and his sons, described the former judge as "a splendid public servant," and contended the government failed to produce any evidence "worthy of belief to show that Judge Johnson ever was motivated by corruption."

Climatic Session
The trial opened on February 27 on an indictment returned by a federal grand jury at Scranton on Sept. 11, 1945, after a lengthy investigation.

The climatic court session opened at 10:02 a. m., with the jury filing into the box. Before asking the jury if its members had reached a verdict Judge Fee announced "the court at this time vacates the judgment" against Capt. Albert W. Johnson, Jr., who, the jury later also acquitted.

Judge Fee then asked the jury if it had reached a verdict.
"We have your honor," replied Paul H. Negley, of Lemoyne, the jury foreman.

"Read the Verdict"
Six sheets of paper were handed by the foreman to a bailiff who turned them over to Judge Fee.

The judge examined the papers in detail and then handed them to Hector Johns, deputy court clerk, declaring: "Read the verdict."

Johns asked the defendants and the jurors to rise and then read the verdicts separately, starting with that on Greens and ending with that of Former Judge Johnson.

The faces of the defendants were expressionless as the verdicts were read.

"Not Justified"
Margiotti and Raymond Campbell, Scranton, attorneys for Donald M., and Miller A. Johnson, said an appeal will be filed later in the day in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia.

"In my opinion, the verdict (against the two Johnsons) was not justified by the evidence and the law," Margiotti told a reporter. "However, I never criticize a court or a jury."

Meanwhile, Miller A., and Donald M. Johnson and Memo and Greens were held in custody of U. S. Deputy Marshal William Capello in the marshal's office. Capello said "They will be taken to the Dauphin county jail to be held there until we receive instructions from the Attorney General as to the Federal institution where they are to be taken."

Capello said that usually requires a day or so.

When Judge Fee charged the jurors Saturday he advised them to determine the case without "vindictiveness, and of the other hand, without fear or sympathy."

He asserted "some overt acts had been proved," adding that it was up to the jury to decide whether they (the acts) were done in connection with any conspiracy charged by the government.

The jury spent nearly eight hours in the jury room Saturday, finally

Following a leisurely breakfast yesterday morning, the jurors returned to courthouse at 10:45 a. m., when only a handful of court attaches were present. It was later reported they planned to remain there all day, if necessary.

"Don't Waive Anything"
Shortly after 1 p. m., one of the jurors guarding the jury room hurried through the courtroom with a message for Presiding Judge Fee and word spread an announcement was impending. The six defendants, their counsel and government attorneys quickly assembled in the courtroom.

At the end of a 45-minute wait, Judge Fee appeared at a door of the courtroom and sent word to the attorneys for both sides that court would reconvene at 10 a. m., the following day. Previously, newspapermen saw a court attaché consult with defense counsel and overheard one declare "We don't waive anything."

Asked later by reporters if any question had been raised about taking a jury announcement on Sunday, Judge Fee withheld all comment.

Things Of The Soil

Hydrangea Planting And Care

An accurate census of American home grounds would probably reveal the hydrangea leading in popularity among flowering shrubs. Yet, despite this widespread culture, hydrangeas suffer from several mistakes in their planting and care. In as much as March is the best time of year to plant this shrub, here are a few brief recommendations:

Efforts to obtain blue flowers often lead to the sacrifice of this shrub's natural beauty and utility. First, therefore, in growing hydrangeas, emphasize the plant's merits as they are. Second, if blue flowers are preferred and the addition of alum in the soil does not produce the desired shade, grow lilacs, delphiniums, lobelias, anemones or other perennials or annuals which furnish blue flowers. However, nurseries are now offering varieties of hydrangeas which bear distinctly blue shades of bloom.

Hydrangea P.G. is the favorite outdoor sort. This is so named from its botanical classification—Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. There are other species hardy in this latitude. One national nursery is listing a double-flowered hydrangea under the name H. Demotoi. It may prove worthy.

Planting should be done as early in March as soil can be worked, although late March planting is satisfactory where the plant roots are properly protected from excessive loss of moisture before they are in the ground. Old crowding clumps may be lifted, divided and replanted safely this month.

An important key to success with hydrangeas is found in furnishing the shrub a deeply mellow, well drained loam so liberally balanced with organic matter and fertility that top growth is luxuriant. It is only when the tops are so thrifty that severe pruning is possible, and fine blooms come chiefly from severe pruning. Where soil measures up to this standard, open sunshine is permitted. However, some light shade is tolerated where drainage is good and the loam is deep.

There is a well founded belief that hydrangeas resent too much fresh manure and fertilizer at planting time. Thus it may be advisable to use rich loam under and around the naturally spread roots. Thereafter fertility can be maintained by spading well rotted manure into the top soil in late fall or early spring and by feeding with commercial fertilizer in March.

Hydrangeas seldom begin to bloom until late summer. Their season of bloom may find the weather hot and dry and the flowers suffer from deficient moisture. The best insurance against drought is a thorough soaking of the soil once or twice a week. This means allowing water to soak to a depth of several inches rather than merely sprinkling the foliage. An effective way to water this and other large shrubs is to allow the hose to trickle all night—the equivalent of an all-night rain.

Hydrangeas are remarkably free from insect enemies and diseases. Occasionally late mildew infects the foliage, especially where air circulation is not free in crowded clumps. But this fungous trouble can be promptly checked by one or more applications of superfine dusting sulphur. Winter-killing, a condition to which several species and varieties of hydrangeas are subject in this latitude, can be reduced by ridging the plants with soil just before freezing weather arrives in late November or early December. Good drainage increases the plant's over-winter vigor.

REACH FINALS THIS WEEK IN COURT BATTLES

By TOM SHERIVER

Harrisburg, March 24 (AP)—Four survivors in Class A and a like number of class B high school basketball teams swing into the final week of the 1946-47 court season with sectional and state championships still at issue.

The Class A teams settle the eastern and western championships tomorrow night and the winners will meet next Saturday at the University of Pennsylvania Palestra to decide the state title for another year.

Wednesday night the Class B teams will meet with the same champions at stake, but there is a possibility that the state championship game, originally scheduled for a western floor on Saturday March 29, may be moved to Tuesday, April 1, and played on an eastern court.

Close Games Indicated
The finalists for the Class A championship at Penn's Palestra tomorrow will be Allentown's defending title-holders and a streak-shattering combination from Williamsport. The rivals met once before this year, at Allentown, with the Canaries in front by a margin of five points.

The western championship will be decided at the University of Pittsburgh stadium, with Duquesne's newly crowned WPIAL champions meeting a formidable band of Bradford Ows who will be ready to test the skill of the high-scoring "Dukes."

Bradford's record would indicate that Duquesne will have no easy encounter in the western finals. The Ows turned back the leading teams of the northwest sector, including Sharon and Sharpsville, and their only handicap may be the long trip from the state's northern border to Pitt's stadium.

In Class B ranks it will be Weatherly against Wyoming in the east, with the game slated for the Hazlet high floor on Wednesday night. If Weatherly wins there has been some discussion about playing the eastern Class B finals at Rockne Memorial Hall, Allentown.

The western contenders are Irwin, champions of the WPIAL, and Karns City, undefeated contender from Butler county, with a record of 21 consecutive victories to their credit, the last a triumph over Rocky Grove, champions of district ten.

The Irwin-Karns City game is slated for the Pitt stadium, and the interest shown by the fans in this fray may determine the site of the Class B state finals.

Catholic Champions
Meanwhile, three Pennsylvania high school championships were sewed up over the week-end. St. George's high of Pittsburgh edged Mauch Chunk Catholic 43-41 to win the Class B flag.

St. Joseph's of Philadelphia trounced Harrisburg Catholic 51-39 for the Eastern regional title and the right to meet Pittsburgh North Catholic for state honors.

Pittsburgh Central Catholic routed St. Mary's Central Catholic, 43-34, to win the 11th annual Knights of Columbus invitation tournament at Williamsport.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)
Tampa, Fla.—March 24 (AP)—The search by the Chicago Cubs or the Philadelphia Phillies for a shortstop may be over now that Eddie Miller has rejoined the Cincinnati Reds.

An outstanding shortstop since 1939 Miller previously had announced his retirement from the game after an army injury hampered his playing last season.

Yesterday however, the 30-year-old veteran advised the Red management that he had changed his mind and would like to rejoin the club.

President Warren Giles of the Reds has hinted that Miller would be traded to the highest bidder and both the Cubs and the Phillies had previously been reported to be interested in acquiring the brilliant infielder.

The Reds have two rookies and two holdovers battling for their shortstop berth and probably would ask for a hard-hitting left fielder as part of a deal that would send Miller to another club. Left field has been the Rhinelander's sore spot for a long time.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24 (AP)—The Big Three of the St. Louis Cardinal mound staff, each taking a three-inning turn in their first competitive pitching since the 1946 World Series, reassured their teammates yesterday by shutting out the New York Yankees, 3-0, on a total of only four hits.

Harry Brecheen yielded two hits and two walks and had two strikeouts. Murry Dickson permitted one hit, no passes and had two strikeouts. Howie Pollet gave up one hit, one walk and struck out three.

Miami, Fla., March 24 (AP)—General Manager Bill Dewitt says crowds attending the exhibitions at the St. Louis Browns' training base have not been up to expectations while costs have been high and that the club will have to pay out about $30,000 more than it takes in.

He described as premature, however, a story in a local newspaper saying the Browns probably will not return to Miami next year.

Miami, Fla., March 24 (AP)—The Boston Braves go to West Palm Beach today to meet the Philadelphia Athletics. Mort Cooper and Lefty Warren Spahn are nominated for Beantown Hill duty.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
New York, March 24 (AP)—Georgia's national intercollegiate golf champion, George Hamer, has withdrawn from college so he can go to England with the Walker cup team.

Gene Dahrreder also failed to return to Georgia for the winter quarter. . . . That seems to make it a cinch for Louisiana State in the Southern Intercollegiate tourney next month and to make the NCAA golf in June a wide open affair.

LSU still has Sonny Ellis, Jimmie Wittenberg, etc., from last year's crack team plus Freshman Joe Moore, who recently fired a 61 over the par 72 college course. . . . For the national meet, of course, they'll have to reckon with Oklahoma, Stanford, and a few other toughies.

Looks like the college tennis field is wide open, too, since Bob and Tom Falkenberg have dropped out of Southern California U. for a year.

MONDAY MATINEE

The Wisconsin crew already is on the water preparing for the Poughkeepsie Regatta, but word from Madison is that the oarsmen get more conditioning running two and a half miles to and from the course than they do rowing on the river with shortened oars. . . . Bruce Drake's wide keelboat proposal for curbing extra-tall basketballers will get a lot of consideration from the coaches and rules committee this week but before its adopted they'll do a lot of studying about the effect on the three-second rule. . . . Although the death of Col. E. H. Bradley last year ended the possibility that his green and white colors would show in front in this year's Kentucky derby, no fewer than six Bradley-bred colts are being prepared for the big race.

A freshman halfback who turned up at Auburn's spring practice is named Wade Wallace. Wonder how he ever got away from Duke's Wallace Wade?

UTES TO MEET 'CATS TONIGHT

New York, March 24 (AP)—Utah university's second Cinderella team in four years challenges the powerful Kentucky Wildcats in the finals of the National Invitation Basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden tonight as the court sport's whirlwind series of post-season activities swings into their closing week.

Oklahoma and Holy Cross take over the garden floor tomorrow night to battle it out for the National Collegiate A. A. title and there are reports that the winner will be matched with the N. I. T. champ on Thursday night for the benefit of the American Olympic basketball committee.

College basketball's parting shot of the 1946-47 season comes Saturday night when an eastern all-star squad coached by Nat Holman of college takes on a western group directed by Hank Iba of Oklahoma A. and M. in a charity game sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

Top-seeded Kentucky is out to win the invitation tourney for the second straight year tonight, a feat accomplished by only one other team, St. John's turned the trick in 1943 and 1944.

The Utes nipped third-seeded Duquesne, 45-44, in the first game and then bounced West Virginia, ranked second, out of the semifinals, 64-62, as Kentucky eliminated fourth-ranked North Carolina State, 60-42.

NEW SWIM STAR LOWERS RECORD

New Haven, Conn., March 24 (AP)—For a chap who took his first swimming lessons in a Philadelphia public bath house about seven years ago, Joe Verdeur of LaSalle college has come along at a record pace.

Verdeur, 21-year-old freshman, is the world's fastest breaststroke swimmer today and improving. He's a sure bet for Olympic honors on the say of Bob Kipthuth, Yale's veteran coach, and other experts.

Sandy-haired Joe was the big hit of the two-day eastern inter-collegiate swimming league's invitation meet here over the week-end, even outshining Yale's water wizards who captured five of the 11 titles.

Verdeur, who wants to be a dentist, generated top excitement Saturday night when he registered a scorching 2:16.4 in Yale's 25-yard pool to lower his own 200-yard breaststroke world record by three and one-tenth seconds.

What made his feat even more impressive was that only 23 minutes earlier he had won the gruelling 300-yard individual medley (breaststroke, backstroke and freestyle).

"TRY" RICKEY IN ABSENTIA

Sarasota, Fla., March 24 (AP)—Although the principal "defendant," President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was unable to attend because of a death in his family, the baseball hearing by Commissioner A. B. Chandler was expected to start here today as scheduled.

Chandler declined to discuss in advance just how Rickey was to be "tried" in absentia in the defamation charges lodged by President Larry MacPhail of the New York Yankees, but Dodgers' Manager Leo Durocher and Harold Parrott, the club's road secretary, were expected to be on hand in the absence of their chief.

Rickey sought postponement of the "trial" after the death of his brother-in-law, John Moulton, at Lucasville, Ohio, but Chandler felt the hearing could proceed without Rickey's presence, even though it was at Rickey that MacPhail directly aimed the 10-page blast which led to the hearing.

Says Gamblers At Game
MacPhail, climaxing an extended feud between himself and the Dodgers organization, is calling upon Rickey to prove his recent assertion to newsmen that a known gambler or two sat in MacPhail's private box during an exhibition game between the Dodgers and the Yankees this spring at Havana.

MacPhail claims that the men in question actually occupied a box immediately adjoining his, back of the Yankee dugout.

Three Killed In Army Plane Crash

Sumter, S. C., March 24 (AP)—A C-45 Army transport crashed 15 miles north of Camden before dawn and killed its three occupants, the Army Air Base at Shaw field announced today.

Shaw field withheld the names of those killed pending notification of next of kin.

The plane was on a night training flight from Pope field at Fort Bragg, N. C.

FROM BOX TO DELUXE

Chicago, (AP)—Lee Williams has come to the end of the trail in tramping streets looking for a place to house his family. Since last July he and Mrs. Williams and their six children have been living in an eight by eight foot "cracker box" trailer.

Daily Williams answered advertisements and rang doorbells in search of more commodious quarters. Now the family is looking forward to receiving a promised two-story, three-bedroom trailer with adjustable porch, gift of a trailer manufacturing company which heard that the children all slept in one bunk.

The new "home" is valued at $5,000.

URGES END TO RENT CONTROLS

Washington, March 24 (AP)—An end to rent controls was urged today by Arthur W. Binns, president of the National Home and Property Owners Foundation.

Claiming to represent a nationwide organization of property owners, Binns told the House Banking committee that continuation of rent ceilings for another year as proposed in pending legislation would strangle the rental housing industry and aggravate the shortage of homes.

The legislation, he said in a prepared statement, proposed to give freedom to the home construction and rental industry while at the same time it would "extend the stranglehold of rent control."

Binns said his organization would support legislation allowing owners of rented property an increase of not less than 15 per cent to compensate for "the tremendous increase in costs they have suffered since the rent freeze went into effect."

ACHESON SAYS NO TROOPS IN GREECE PLANS

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson declared firmly and flatly today that American plans for bulwarking Greece and Turkey against Communism "do not include our sending troops."

"We have not been asked to do so. We do not foresee any need to do so. And we do not intend to do so," Acheson asserted.

His testimony was prepared for the opening of hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on President Truman's program for shoring up the independence of the two southern European countries with American dollars, weapons and limited military missions.

Lead Away from War

As he did before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, last week, the acting cabinet officer said he does not think the aid proposals will lead to war.

"I think that quite the opposite is true," Acheson told the senators. "These proposals are designed to increase the stability of, and to further the opportunity for democratic development in, two countries most important to the world community."

"These are not acts which lead to war. They lead in the other direction."

Push Aid Program

"They help to maintain the integrity and independence—what the United Nations Charter calls the 'sovereign equality'—of states. That is one of the principles upon which the whole effort to organize the world for peace is founded."

Acheson's testimony before the Senate committee was one side of a two-way Congressional drive to press the aid program through. It was spurred by documentary accusations that Russia is attempting to hoist the flag of Communistic control over both Greece and Turkey.

These documents—titled "secret" label removed under Congressional pressure to give the nation the "full facts"—accused Russia of waging a "war of nerves" against Turkey, told of a "master plan" to make Greece Communistic, and called Poland a Soviet "satellite."

Explains Use of Funds

In the second segment of the Capitol Hill drive, Undersecretary of State Will Clayton, in charge of the department's economic affairs, told the House Foreign Relations Committee that all but $150,000,000 of the proposed $400,000,000 aid program would be spent for military purposes in the two countries.

He said approximately $300,000,000 would go to Greece, split on a 50-50 basis for military and civilian necessities. Of the latter $150,000,000, he said that $80,000,000 had been earmarked for internal costs to help Greece return to economic stability, $50,000,000 for foreign exchange

2 AMENDMENTS ARE IN OFFING IN NLRB FIGHT

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Both the National Labor Relations Board and the Conciliation Service faced battles for their very existence today as the House took up the $1,685,586-780 Labor Department-Federal Security Agency appropriation bill.

With two days of debate on tap two amendments were in the offing.

One, Democratic-backed, would re-structure Conciliation Service cuts.

The other, Republican-proposed, would abolish the NLRB outright. Neither may be voted on until tomorrow, however.

Rep. Gore (D-Tenn.), told newsmen the Democratic amendment will be offered to offset the action of the Republican-controlled appropriations committee abolishing the job director of the Conciliation Service and approximately 100 other top spots under the director.

Warren Under Attack
The committee struck at the Conciliation Service after criticizing Director Edgar L. Warren and asserting that "anyone whose background may be subject to question" should not be employed by the government.

Warren had acknowledged during committee questioning that he once belonged to the American League for Peace and Democracy and the Washington Bookshop, which the committee said are "Communist inspired fronts." But he said he joined them "without any knowledge that they were Communist organizations" and resigned as soon as he found out.

Five former members of the War Labor Board have rallied to Warren's defense, and House Democratic Floor Leader Rayburn of Texas called the committee's action "utterly unjustified."

Appropriation Cut
The identity of the Republican who will offer the death-to-the-NLRB amendment was not disclosed, but GOP committee members said it definitely would be laid before the House.

The committee cut $3,950,300 from the board's $7,984,000 budget and said some committeemen "believe that the board should be abolished and its functions re-created under new law."

Rep. Keefe (R-Wis.), who headed the subcommittee which wrote the bill, predicted its passage without major change.

Gore, who has accused Republicans of not acting in keeping with their announced plans to cut the President's 1947 budget by $6,000,000,000, told newsmen the final reduction would amount to only $310,000,000 at the present rate.

He claimed an $800,000,000 reduction in tax refund allotments in the already-passed Treasury appropriation bill and a $500,000,000 cut in hospital construction funds in the pending measure are "phony."

ACCORD NEARER IN STEEL TALKS

Pittsburgh, March 24 (AP)—Perked up by the possibility of legislation clarifying the status of court suits for back portal-to-portal pay, the U. S. Steel Corp., and the CIO-United Steelworkers may soon be able to get down to the brass tacks of wage demands in their contract discussions.

The contract sessions have been recessed indefinitely and discussions held before the recess pointedly avoided all "economic" issues.

But with bills banning portal suits having been passed by both houses of Congress, negotiators were expected to be able to make faster progress in coming weeks if a compromise measure is enacted.

Contract Extended
Both sides have said it was difficult to discuss any union wage demands when the corporation did not know how deeply it might have to dig into its pocket to pay portal pay claims.

Meanwhile, workers in the five subsidiaries covered by the negotiations are working under a 1946 contract which both sides agreed to extend from February 15 to April 30.

Union objectives include an unspecified but "substantial" wage boost, union shop, annual guaranteed wage and social benefits.

Chapter 11

The pointed purple shadow of the cottonwood had reached the far side of the adobe by the time the Hardys and Jeff finished dinner. The air was fresh and cool, a stronger than usual breeze building up as it swept down from the northern ranges. Mr. Hardy with his ever-present woolen serape at hand settled himself comfortably on the porch; Jeff suggested that he and Linda take a short walk. After a questioning look at her father who nodded reassuringly, she accepted.

"Where shall we go, Jeff?"
"I thought we could stroll up to The Finger. It marks the southern boundary of my property."
"The Finger? What's that?"
He grinned. "It's better known as Indian Rock because of the picture language some ancient tribes painted on it, but Dad and I renamed it The Finger."

"Why? Does it look like one?"
"Sort of. It was more in honor of Amos Larabee, Dad's old prospecting partner. He had a funny habit of saying 'I'll put the finger on him' about anyone he didn't like. Since there were an awful lot of people he didn't approve of, he was saying it most of the time. Sort of a curse or hex of his."

"He sounds like a formidable old fellow. Is he still alive?"

"As far as I know,—still covering the desert hoping to find a gold mine. Hasn't made an important strike yet. He built himself a little shack outside of Yuma and he sort of covers the area around there."

They started across the desert, Mephisto the hound dog at their heels adjusting their stride to the gradual slope toward the foothills. In spite of her small stature Linda walked well and easily. Jeff noted that she carried herself erectly and her head was firm upon her shoulders. Her figure was compact and trim from her golden braided coronet to the curved-in heels of her boots. She sniffed the air gratefully. . . .

Jeff chuckled audibly. "Better be careful, the desert can get under your skin just like the ocean. It won't let you go, it'll put the finger on you for sure."

"It already has, I'm afraid. Cities and all the advantages of urban life will never mean much to me again. It's all this wonderful space."

"Guess I warned you too late," he said. "You're already caught."

Indian Rock was a peculiarly round formation with a jutting shelf that from the side resembled a clenched fist with one pointing finger. It stood alone on a slope surrounded by sandy waste, undoubtedly the result of some wrenching natural upheaval of a prehistoric age. From its shelf a sweeping panorama of the desert was seen.

Linda and Jeff sat on the ledge watching the weirdly brilliant and changing sunset soften the angular shapes of the saguaro and finally turn all the desert growths to shadowy purple blotches against the darkening sand. Unconsciously Jeff reached for the bullet and tossed it aimlessly until Linda reached out and stopped him.

"What's that Jeff? It looks like a bullet."

"It is a bullet." Inwardly he cursed his thoughtlessness then suddenly decided to tell her the whole story. It was good to discuss it with someone both sympathetic and intelligent.

"Coulter wants your land badly. I wonder why? . . . it can't be the house."

"Dad always insisted our property contained valuable minerals but he never found any that I know of."

Linda's thick lashes came together. "Suppose Coulter found something of value that ran from his land over to yours. That would be an incentive."

Jeff stared at her. "What do you mean his land?"

"Just that." She gestured to the west. "The land next to yours. He told Dad and me he bought that section three years ago, only he was careful to refer to the whole business as his land."

"When I left here Al Kenton owned that property."

"Perhaps Coulter did him out of it as he's trying to do with you."

"Well it makes the situation a little clearer anyway."

"Jeff, even if you can't find your deed you can prove your title you know. Perhaps the Veteran's Bureau would help you or a good lawyer."

"But that all takes time and money."

"It's none of my business but didn't you save any of your army pay?"

"Yes, quite a neat sum, but I had other plans for it."

"Oh." Her eyes grew faintly remote. "A girl maybe?"

"Ummm, and what a girl! Big brown eyes with inch-long lashes and a wonderful disposition, the contented type." He grinned teasingly. "Her name is Belle."

"That's nice," Linda said stiffly.

"She's a cow," he added and chuckled.

"A—what!"

"A cow," Jeff repeated. "You see I planned to get a start raising pure-bred cattle. That's what I studied at college and that's what I've saved every cent for. I thought I'd buy a little ranch up around Phoenix and get started. Lawyer's fees would eat into it pretty heavily."

"I see what you mean. Cows cost money, don't they?"

"Big money,—the cows I'm interested in."

Linda stood up suddenly, in the quickly lowering dusk her face was indistinct, but her voice was clear and positive. . . .

"Look Jeff, I have a hunch, call it woman's intuition if you will. Why don't you go and see Mr. Gentry? He's a mining man and you say Coulter seemed friendly with his daughter and her friend. If Coulter is trying to interest him in this property, which seems a logical conclusion, he might say why."

Jeff stood up beside her, attempting to see her face and failing. "It's worth a try anyway," he agreed. "It should get results, good or bad."

Chapter 12

If it were not for the myriad shimmering panes of glass in the Gentry hacienda, the house would have been undistinguishable at any distance. Built of native rock, at sunrise and dusk when the skies were not brilliant enough to be reflected, the estate merged into the purple, gray and clay shades of the Arizona desert. Its architecture was its own camouflage.

As Jeff urged Star up the curved approach to the house two Great Danes bounded from the long canvas-decked veranda and barking, came to meet him. Their noise brought a servant to the driveway. Jeff looked down from the saddle at the white-coated Filipino.

"Is Mr. Gentry in?"

"Who shall I say is calling, sir?"

"My name is Irskine but it won't mean anything to Mr. Gentry. However, I wish to talk with him about a matter of importance. Please tell him that."

The servant moved away on silent feet and Jeff looked about him. . . .

If the veranda was an indication of the furnishings within, he could expect luxury. It was an extensive porch protected from the sun by long colorful rolls of canvas, arranged with comfortable upholstered chairs, low redwood tables covered with magazines, potted plants, bowls of fruit and boxes of cigarettes.

"Mr. Gentry will see you in his study, sir."

The servant came up behind him so quietly that he was startled. He followed the Filipino down a hall off which opened spacious richly-furnished rooms. Jeff noted with interest that there were many jars and art objects made of burnished copper and bronze.

He stepped into Claude Gentry's study and received another surprise.

For some reason he had formed a picture of a dark-haired, hard-eyed copper tycoon, the logical sire of a girl like Monica. Evidently she had inherited her looks from her mother; for Gentry was squat, sandy-haired and blue-eyed. The eyes were mild yet shrewd, deceptively wide, and now they focused inquiringly on Jeff.

"You've never heard of me, Mr. Gentry—" It was half a question. "No, I'm afraid I haven't Irskine."

"It's very good of you to see me then, sir."

"I've been an industrialist too long to disregard anything that may involve myself. The servant said your business was important to me."

"It may be."

"Tell me about it. He pushed a box of cigarettes toward Jeff.

Jeff told him the story from the time of his arrival home omitting Brasher's shot at him and Coulter's threats. There was something strangely compelling about Gentry's snub-nosed genial face. It encouraged men to speak their minds. Jeff wondered belatedly if Gentry's frank expression hadn't tripped his business rivals into making disclosures that they later regretted. However, when Jeff finished, Gentry was obviously puzzled.

"I don't quite see how this involves me, Irskine."

"It doesn't unless Coulter has tried to interest you in his property. That's what I'm trying to find out."

"I think he's discovered a vein of ore that runs over into my land. I know he hasn't capital enough to mine on a large scale himself and I thought he might have made you an offer."

Gentry put his fingertips together. "Suppose he has, Irskine?"

Jeff leaned forward. "What's so valuable in that ground, sir?"

"Why should I tell you? This is a business deal. If I see how a man's land can be of value to me I don't tell him its advantages so he can raise the price on me."

Jeff reddened realizing he had expected too much. "I've been frank with you sir. If Coulter sold you my property you'd be in trouble because I intend to prove that it is my land if it takes several years to do it. Won't you give me some information in exchange for mine?"

Gentry smiled blandly. "You say you can't find your deed. . . . Weren't there any witnesses to the sale?"

"The man Dad bought it from is dead, but old Amos Larabee witnessed the sale. He lives near Yuma—prospects around the desert."

"If I were you I'd look him up and have him sign an affidavit to that effect. It should act as a restraint on Coulter for awhile."

"I had planned to do that, sir," Gentry pushed the cigarette box toward him again; it was beautifully made of a mineral rock veined with jade and moss green streaks and wider ones of brilliant blue. "Know what that is Irskine?"

"Looks like malachite," Jeff disliked the change of subject.

"It is—malachite and azurite, quite a market for them now."

Gentry looked beyond Jeff and his round face broke into a delighted smile. "Come in my dear, here's a young man I'd like you to meet."

"On we've already met—and what an introduction!"

Jeff stood up. Monica was behind him and behind her stood the dark lean-jawed young man he'd seen in the station wagon talking to Coulter. The girl explained her former meeting with Jeff to her father then turned to the man staring over her shoulder.

"Jeff this is Ransom Fawcett, he's Dad's secretary."

The two men nodded. Fawcett rather curtly.

"You're just the man I'm looking for," Monica continued. "My brother has just been released from the Navy—he's coming home tomorrow and I'm planning a celebration. Won't you come over in the evening for it?"

Jeff was about to decline until he saw the displeased droop of Fawcett's lips then some perverse emotion made him accept. Gentry beamed at him.

"And bring that little Hardy girl with you," he added. "It will do her good to get away from that invalid father of hers for a few hours."

Chapter 13

As Jeff Irskine on Star left the palatial Gentry estate behind, he found his train of thought confused. Obviously the copper magnate's secretary, Ransom Fawcett, had a feeling of intense dislike for Jeff. His eyes had hardened rather than warmed with friendliness as Monica introduced them. Yet on what was his emotion based? Jealousy? Surely the fact that Jeff met Monica on a trafficless road and changed a tire for her was not enough to cause that.

Or was his attitude formed from something Coulter had said? It was a puzzle but the antagonism was definitely there.

He wished Monica had not interrupted his talk with Gentry. He felt certain the industrialist had wanted to assist him without actually seeming to; yet just when Jeff was warming up to the purpose of his visit, Gentry had switched the conversation to the cigarette box as though it were of equal importance.

The cigarette box. . . . What was it Gentry had said about it?

Malachite. . . . azurite. . . . Quite a market for it now!

Jeff pulled on the reins in his excitement so that Star took a side step and almost pranced into the jagged thorns of an immense barrel cactus. Instinctively the gelding had headed for the small adobe and the fragrant-smelling stall that he knew awaited him, now a tug on the right rein informed him they were turning in the opposite direction toward town.

In McCloud, Jeff went immediately to the town's small drug store. Old Mr. Perry who ran it had refused to bow to time and the public, his store still sold drugs and nothing else. He'd have no truck with sody fountains and new-fangled trash, he informed traveling salesmen who thought him a good prospect, and because of his integrity his pharmacy was still well patronized.

He filled Jeff's order for bottles of alcohol, ammonia and hydrochloric acid with only a faint list of his white eyebrows.

"Making some mineral tests?"

"I have nothing to go on," Jeff said quickly. "Please don't mention it."

"Wouldn't think of it, boy. Talk between me and my customers is purely confidential—business ethics ye know."

Linda was cultivating her flower bed and sensed his excitement at once; she blew a golden tendril of hair back from her flushed face and scanned him anxiously. "What is it? Did Mr. Gentry tell you something?"

"He may have—I don't know yet."

Her eyes grew enormous. "Sounds interesting and confusing."

He led Star around to his stall, calling back over his shoulder. "Bring that cardboard box of rocks around here and we'll find out."

In the tool shed that was a part of the stable he rummaged around until he found his father's old mining equipment. He cleaned the alcohol lamp and put it aside then searched for a few strands of platinum wire. After finding them he carried the whole business around to the new adobe room which was still unroofed. Linda joined him with the rock specimens, her face glowing with anticipation.

"Dad's as excited as I am," she said.

"I didn't mean to exclude him," Jeff explained, "but these tests will give off fumes. I was afraid for his lungs."

"You are considerate, Jeff."

She said it so solemnly that he thought she was being sarcastic until he saw her eyes, then he smiled. "Well, we'll see now. Maybe nothing will happen after all."

Selecting a rock specimen he spilled drops of hydrochloric acid on it. It effervesced violently. Linda gave a small cry of surprise. . . .

"What does that mean?"

"It means it's probably malachite or azurite."

Next he powdered a bit of the mineral, dipped his test wire in acid, touched the specimen and placed it in the flame of the alcohol lamp. It produced a blue-green flame almost at once. He went through the other tests then—ammonia, charcoal and borax bead. On the final one, heating the specimen with hydrochloric acid, the fumes did not have the smell of rotten eggs which would have indicated one of the copper-sulphur minerals.

Jeff wiped smoke and perspiration from his forehead; he was grinning.

"It's malachite all right, that's what Gentry was trying to tell me. Linda, you've misjudged him—he's a good egg after all."

She pouted doubtfully. "Maybe. Tell me, what is malachite?"

"You've probably seen it often and not recognized it. It's a copper ore,

FLOOD STOPS LONDON SUBWAY

London, March 24 (AP)—Flood waters seeped into the largest London subway power station today, halting service on 40 miles of tracks and bringing chaotic conditions to much of the world's largest city.

As floods spread in still more areas of northern England, wiping out-crop prospects over many acres, talk started in London over the possibility of seeking another American loan. The Labor government maintained silence.

Outside London, York was the major sufferer as the swollen Ouse river virtually cut off the industrial city of 100,000 in two. Fire, fanned by a strong wind, burned for eight hours in the three upper decks of the 22,424-ton British liner Monarch of Bermuda, in drydock at Heburn-on-Tyne.

Virtually everyone was late to work in London. The dead subway's caused Londoners to travel by strange and devious routes. Service was stopped entirely on two main subway routes and slowed on the other three. Seventy subway stations were closed.

Long lines stood at stops for buses, trolleys and taxis and before telephone booths. Some formed at the better hitch-hike locations. The transportation jam was the worst in memory here.

Elsewhere in the flood region, covering 34 of England's 40 counties and parts of Wales, rivers were reported receding after the greatest river disaster in living memory. The Air Ministry forecast scattered showers and a frost.

BUDGET BATTLE SEEN THIS WEEK IN HARRISBURG

Harrisburg, March 24 (AP)—The Battle of the Budget opens this week in the Pennsylvania General Assembly with the House squaring away for a vote on Governor Duff's $133,000,000 tax program.

The House Ways and Means committee paved the way for the showdown through approval of the levies on corporations and luxuries, which Governor Duff recommended to help finance the commonwealth's all-time high $860,000,000 budget for the 1947-48 biennium.

As the tax program reached the House floor with a vote possible on Wednesday, the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce came out against one of the corporation levies and the Democratic minority renewed a demand for financing part of the state's building program through revival of the General State Authority.

Other issues that may reach a vote during the 12th week of the 1947 session included:

1—Legislation in the House authorizing a maximum $500 bonus to 1,314,000 Pennsylvania veterans of World War II to be financed through a $500,000,000 bond issue.

2—A bill in the Senate to make permanent a wartime experience rating system through which employers with a record of steady employment are given a lower rate for contributions to the Unemployment Compensation fund.

3—Another measure in the Senate to permit life insurance companies in Pennsylvania to invest in housing projects. They are not limited to such investments in slum areas.

The Pennsylvania State Chamber's opposition to renewal of a four-mill capital stock tax was voiced in a statement by Dr. Leonard P. Fox, the secretary, who said it "might be regarded as a 'keep out' sign by new industries."

Hard-Boiled Competition
"Both Pennsylvania and out-of-state industries are making fateful decisions right now on postwar expansion and new plant locations," Dr. Fox said. "The competition between states is hard-boiled and intensive. The locations that are selected by industries during the next two years will establish the pattern of state and region leadership for years to come."

Dr. Fox said that renewal of the manufacturers' tax to raise $24,000,000 and a new formula for computing the state corporate net income tax to raise $20,000,000 "places a larger state tax burden upon industry in Pennsylvania than is generally imposed on industry in other comparable states."

"Many industries already have by-passed Pennsylvania because of relatively lower tax loads in other states. Every community in the state that has negotiated for new industries has encountered resistance on this score."

YOUNG FATHER

He was severely burned about the face, head and hands.

Two passing motorists, Robert Nicklas, Highfield, Md., and Glen Fox, Sabillasville, Md., came upon the scene at approximately the same time. Nicklas returned to Blue Ridge Summit and summoned the fire company.

Find Charred Bones

Charred bones of the victim were found near a window indicating that Zolan had been attempting to get out when he was overcome.

Firemen were unable to save anything, the flames having spread rapidly, and only the chimney place remained standing.

Maryland state policemen and firemen attributed the cause of the fire to an over-heated chunk stove in the living room.

Milford Sanders, Blue Ridge Summit, owner of the house, and brother-in-law of Zolan Harbaugh, told policemen his brother and family was scheduled to move next Thursday into another property in Blue Ridge Summit.

Sanders estimated his loss at $1,500 and $1,000 for the furniture and clothing lost by the Harbaughs. None was covered by insurance.

The Franklin County Red Cross took charge Sunday in assisting the Harbaughs, who lost all of their clothing and possessions.

Funeral Held Today

The victim was born in Frederick county, Md., a son of Clarence and Grace E. (Miller) Harbaugh. Blue Ridge Summit. He was employed by the Waynesboro Machine company.

Funeral services were conducted this afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. Jacobs Reformed church, Fountaindale, by the Rev. John Garman, Fairfield R. D., assisted by the Rev. Mr. Cori, Sabillasville. Interment in St. Jacobs cemetery.

New Evidence In Slaying 'Terrific'

Santa Ana, Calif., March 24 (P)—New evidence which he described as "terrific" was claimed by Sheriff James Musick today in his inquiry into the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Overell, wealthy Los Angeles couple, aboard their pleasure cruiser in Newport harbor March 15.

The Overells' daughter, Beulah Louise, 17, and her fiancé, George Gollum, 21, are held on murder charges in the dual tragedy. Musick did not disclose the nature of his new "evidence."

The bodies of Overell, 62, Los Angeles finance company head, and his wife, Beulah, 57, were found aboard the shattered hulk of the 47-foot cruiser after an explosion had wrecked it as it lay at anchor. Musick said a quantity of unexploded dynamite and the remains of what was apparently a time clock were found aboard.

Post mortem examinations indicated, said Musick, that both had been slain by blows on the head.

COMMUNISM IS OUTSIDE PALE OF DEMOCRACY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

President Truman's order for a house-cleaning among government employes has pinned the label "disloyal" to anyone who belongs to, or has "sympathetic association with," any group which the attorney general rules to be "Totalitarian, Fascist, Communist or Subversive."

While this order specifically relates only to government service, it is obvious that the label of disloyalty applies equally to any citizen who associates himself with any of the groups in question. Also, since the chief executive's move comes so soon after the pronouncement of his new world policy against aggressive Communism, it's safe to say that he once more is aiming chiefly at the Red ism.

Why? What is it that places Communism outside the pale of western democracy? What about the claim of American Communists and fellow travelers that they will be deprived of constitutional rights if their political ism is banned.

Reverting To Old Viewpoint

One answer is that modern Communism has a major principle that it must come to power through a revolution by force and that the establishment of a Soviet government—which is a totalitarian dictatorship—must be accompanied by a period of terror to impress the significance of the change on the populace. We first saw this put into effect in the Bolshevik revolution which established Russian Communism in 1917.

Communism, as a revolutionary ideology, thus is wholly outside the laws of any country adhering to western democracy. This fact was recognized by both Britain and America for many years after the Bolshevik upheaval of 1917 until finally they took down the bars on Moscow's promise that Communist propaganda for world revolution would cease within their domains.

The United States now appears to be reverting to its old viewpoint. Further striking evidence of this is seen in the refusal of the Supreme court last week to review the case of a man who had been dismissed from federal employment because he belonged to a so-called "Communist front" organization. Federal courts upheld the right to dismiss him, and the Supreme court's action in effect approved the ruling by the lower courts.

ON TRAINING CRUISE

Philadelphia, March 24 (P)—Seven hundred naval reservists from Pennsylvania and New Jersey sail today for San Juan, Puerto Rico, aboard the U.S.S. Macon on a two-week training cruise. The 13,000-ton warship starts its voyage from the Philadelphia naval base where it was constructed. The vessel was commissioned shortly after Japan's surrender.

RUSH FOR COLLEGE

Bethlehem, Pa., March 24 (P)—The deadline for applications from prospective freshmen desiring to enroll next fall in Lehigh University is April 1. More than 12,000 applications for a September freshman enrollment limited to 500 already have been received, the university announced.

Philadelphia, March 24 (P)—

Thieves removed 18 bricks from a wall of a building to gain entrance to the Ridge House Furnishing Co. and made off with $1,500 worth of jewelry and $20 in cash, police reported.

evident truth that all Communist organizations, no matter of what country, take their orders from Moscow. Their policies are Russian and not those of their homelands. We see constant proof of this in the fact that when Russian interests are involved in any international issue, the Communists of all countries come to the defense of Moscow with absolute unanimity of language. That has happened time and again in the United States since Communism got a foothold here.

These are a few of the many reasons why Communism is coming under heavy fire in democratic countries.

Jewish Agency To Outline Its Plans

Jerusalem, March 24 (P)—After a week of closed meetings, the Jewish Agency Executive was expected to issue a statement today outlining its plans for presenting the Jewish case in Palestine to the United Nations.

A source close to the Executive said he believed the statement would demand "unlimited Jewish immigration to Palestine governed only by the country's absorptive capacity."

It was understood that presentation of the Jewish case to the United Nations would be left to the six United States members of the Executive, headed by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, Ohio, plus Dr. Nahum Goldman of London, who is leaving this week for New York.

HOW ADVERTISING MAKES YOUR FUTURE BRIGHTER

Read how the modern methods of mass personal selling are constantly creating both security and opportunity for you!

You'll agree that advertising has just one main purpose—to sell goods or services.

And you'll agree that when more sales are made, there's just naturally more work to be done.

So more sales mean more jobs. Yes, and better jobs, a chance for promotion, or for a raise in pay.

More sales mean more jobs at the factory. More jobs at the mines and mills and farms that supply materials that factory uses. More jobs in the banks, railroads, stores, and the hundred and one businesses that benefit indirectly.

That's how advertising—by selling more goods to more people—makes your job, no matter where you work, a better job, with a better future, and far more security.

Remember this as you see and hear advertising doing its job of selling goods. Tell your friends how advertising works. And be grateful for it. For every hour of the day, advertising is making your home, your income and your personal future more secure.

Other Ways Advertising Helps You:

1. Brings you better goods for less money.
2. Makes shopping more pleasant and easier.
3. Has given us the world's highest standard of living.
